Labour day traffic results

Members of the Haliburton Highlands detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police were kept busy over the Labour Day weekend. Officers participated in a traffic enforcement initiative from Sept. 4 to Sept. 7. The initiative focused on the big four causes of collisions; speeding, distracted driving, impaired driving with extra emphasis on distracted driving.

The big four is a daily concern on our roadways especially during a long weekend where roads are much busier with the public travelling to their vacation destinations. There were numerous charges laid during this Labour Day weekend initiative.

Speeding – 39
Moving violations – 5
Other Highway Traffic Act – 4
Liquor License Act - 4
Compulsory Insurance Act - 1

The OPP would also like to thank the public for their support in this initiative and if you suspect that someone is operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol or drugs, do not hesitate to report it to the police by calling 1-888-310-1122 or 9-1-1.

Golf fundraiser coming up for Food for Kids

Come out to help feed the children of Haliburton County at the Golf for Kids fundraiser Friday, Sept. 25 at Pinestone's golf course.

The event begins at 1 p.m. and includes 18 holes of golf with a cart, Southern Comfort buffet dinner and auction.

Tickets are $150 per person and proceeds will go to Food for Kids and the Highland Storm.

Call 705-457-3444 to register your team.

Getting down to Fifth Business

Bessie's Books and Other Things

Bessie Sullivan
Library CEO

Last month Erin told you about the book that won Haliburton County Reads-the summer sessions and then was chosen for our One Book, One Community (OBOC) selection. That book is Fifth Business by Robertson Davies.

Fifth Business presents us with some interesting challenges. Usually when a library runs an OBOC program, they invite the author of the book to participate in events; this will be difficult for us as Mr. Davies died in 1995. Another challenge is that Fifth Business has had a permanent place in the high school curriculum since the early eighties, so sometimes there is the "I had to read it for school" association rather than "I read it for fun". This is certainly the case for me, but I just re-read it for fun and I'm glad I did. Reading for fun offers a whole new perspective and although this book was written in 1970 it does stand the test of time.

Erin has isolated six main themes in Fifth Business that I agree are bang on. The six themes are "Small Town Gothic" which is defined as novels about small towns that focus on the dark, surreal, and grotesque elements of rural living; "Fateful events" are novels that pivot around one life changing incident; "New Identities" are novels where characters grapple with their identity, or assume a new identity; "Saints and sinners" are novels that examine the good and bad in all of us. "Running away with the circus" consists of novels that feature magic, magicians, and the lure of the circus; and finally the "School of Robertson Davies" which are novels by authors who have been influenced by or compared to Robertson Davies. If you don't want to read or re-read Fifth Business try some of these other choices.

These themes are captured and displayed on what is known as a reading map and the map is available at the library and there is a One Book, One Community button on our website.

For September, HCPL's Online Book Club on Goodreads is concentrating on the theme "Running Away with the Circus."

The four titles from this category are Geek Love by Katherine Dunn which is about a carny family who breed their own human oddities and perform in the backwaters of the United States; All the Broken Things by Kathryn Kuitenbrouwer introduces us to Bo who is recruited as a bear wrestler, but when his sister is taken away by a freak show he must search for her; Son of the Circus by John Irving features a group of misfits that are drawn together by a murder that happened twenty years ago; and The Autobiography of Mrs. Tom Thumb by Melanie Benjamin stars Mrs. Tom Thumb who tells her own story and that of her famous husband.

Anyone can join our online book club. Just go to www.haliburtonlibrary.ca and click on the "g" for Goodreads. Pick up the complete reading map for Fifth Business at any branch of the library or access it from our website by clicking on the One Book One Community button. The whole point of an OBOC campaign is to interest everyone in reading, this is not school, there is no pressure, no deadlines, and no book reports required, just read and tell us that you did.

Smile Cookies

Living Large

Humour by Steve Galea

This week Tim Hortons is selling cookies adorned with smiles to raise funds for the good work the Volunteer Dental Outreach does. The campaign is ingenious and fun.

Plus, since I'm always looking for good excuses to purchase more cookies, it has inspired me to come up with a few more ideas.

How about:

1. A cookie that looks like it is scratching its head. This cookie could help raise funds for math tutoring programs.
2. A cookie that looks like it is winking. This cookie would remind all of us not to take political campaign promises too seriously.
3. A cookie that is flipping you the bird. I think this might raise a lot of money for road rage awareness.
4. A cookie that's shaped like a red and white bobber. What a great idea to raise funds for Take a Kid Fishing week.
5. A cookie that is advertised as six ounces that is actually three. The proceeds of this could raise money for anglers to buy accurate weigh scales.
6. A cookie shaped like socks and sandals with a big X through it. I can think of no better way to raise money for fashion week.
7. A cookie with an indicator light that continues to flash on the left side until finished. This could remind us all to give older drivers plenty of room.
8. A cookie depicting a bear chasing a man to promote the benefits of fitness.
9. A cookie shaped like a man wearing a barrel giving all his cash away. The provincial and federal government could use this to advertise tax time is drawing near.
10. A cookie showing a veterinary bill to promote spay and neuter your pet week.

Get a smile, to give a smile

Smile Cookie sales to benefit Volunteer Dental Outreach

For the second year in a row, local Tim Hortons locations will be supporting the Volunteer Dental Outreach (VDO) for Haliburton County through the annual Smile Cookie campaign.

From Monday, Sept. 14 to Sunday, Sept. 20, both the Minden and Haliburton restaurants will be selling freshly baked, chocolate chunk Smile Cookies for $1 (plus tax) with all of the proceeds going to the VDO.

The initiative raised over $3,000 for the local charity last year.

During the same week, Tim Hortons locations across the country will be selling cookies for charities within their communities.

The Smile Cookie campaign started in 1996 to help raise funds for the Hamilton Children's Hospital in Ontario and has grown to become a major fundraising event at Tim Hortons restaurants.

Last year, the campaign raised $5.3 million across Canada and supported more than 350 local charities.

Interested in getting a dozen or more cookies? A pre-order form will be available online at www.dental-outeach.com.

About the VDO

Located in Haliburton, the VDO provides free urgent dental care for low-income residents of Haliburton County. Since its launch in May of 2011, the clinic has provided over $1.3 million in free dental care to more than 500 residents.

To learn more visit www.dental-outreach.com.

Postal changes for Carnarvon residents

By Chad Ingram

Carnarvon residents who have been using the postal outlet at the local hardware store will now be using community boxes located along Highway 35.

For the past several years, the Castle Building Centre in Carnarvon has housed a postal outlet. It contained 92 boxes, 40 of which were being used, according to Canada Post.

The contract for the postal dealership expired last week and the store's new owner, Kim Emmerson, has decided not to continue with the contract.

In fact, as Emmerson pointed out, he's not been obliged to continue the service since he took over the business in March.

"Even though we didn't have to have it since we took over in March, we did as a public service," said Emmerson, who also owns Emmerson Lumber in Haliburton. "It's just not a good fit for a lumber yard."

Residents were able to receive and send out mail from their boxes, as well as collect larger parcels from staff at the store.

Emmerson said residents had plenty of notice.

"Over the course of the summer, staff pre-warned customers," he said.

Canada Post also sent out correspondence to affected customers.

"Unfortunately, we have not been successful in finding a suitable, alternative host business," Eugene Knapik of Canada Post's media relations department wrote in an email to the paper. "Effective this week, customers within Carnarvon had been receiving their mail at community mailboxes."

The mailboxes are located along Highway 35 on the grass near the Carnarvon ESSO station, which sells stamps.

Knapik pointed out that the newer generation community boxes do have larger parcel compartments than previous models.

For parcels that are larger than the boxes can accommodate, customers will receive a card to pick up their items in West Guilford.

SIRCH set to open hub in Haliburton Village

By Angelica Ingram

Gena Robertson is the type of leader who always has ideas mulling around in the back of her head.

So when the executive director for SIRCH Community Services saw a vacant building in a prime location with a stunning view, conversations began to happen.

Those conversations, which were initiated this past April, resulted in a new downtown hub for SIRCH, located at 2 Victoria St. (formerly Touch of Class Spa).

Set to open on Sept. 21 with an official grand opening, the hub is going to be home to the organization's community kitchen program, bereavement services and much more.

"It's going to be a gorgeous space," said Robertson.

Featuring a large island, the kitchen includes cabinetry and counters donated by Trevor Chaulk of Chaulk Woodworking.

Complete with an commercial kitchen and lots of meeting space, the hub has unlimited possibilities for the organization that offers a variety of social programs, including prenatal nutrition, Dig In workshops, school readiness and more.

This fall SIRCH will be facilitating its Cook it Up program for the second time, an initiative that was successful earlier this year.

"The community was so great around that ... it was so amazing," said the executive director.

The hub, affectionately called SIRCH Central by Robertson, will provide the training space for the participants of the program, which will begin in November.

The organization's grief groups have been using space all over town, from the Haliburton Highlands Museum to the Rails End Gallery. The hub will now give the group a permanent home.

Overlooking the Drag River and Head Lake Park, the view is one of the best in town, something Robertson is acutely aware of.

"For me it's healing and connecting space," she said. "We'll be doing the Journey Through Grief groups, we're running three in the fall, and they'll all be here."

SIRCH is hoping to use the space as a resource centre for the organization, allowing people to drop in and find out more about the services offered.

Other ideas include a warming centre, in the winter, or a seniors drop-in location.

"Certainly we'll let other groups use it and at this point we're thinking we'll do that by donation," said Robertson.

SIRCH staff will continue to work out of the location on County Road 21.

Another standout feature of the space is that it is completely outfitted with furniture and items from the Thrift Warehouse, a social enterprise initiated by SIRCH. Every item, from sofas to tables and wall hangings, will be for sale, allowing the hub to act as a "showroom" for the warehouse.

Robertson is "stoked" about the hub and what it means for the organization and the community.

"It's a beautiful space, it has unlimited possibilities ... it's roomy, it lends itself to all sorts of things," she said. "I think it's going to be pretty busy."

The grand opening will take place at the hub at 2:30 p.m. on Sept. 21 and all are welcome to attend. Those interested in enrolling in the Cook it Up program are encouraged to contact Alisha Lafleur at 705-457-1742.

10 safety tips to prevent household fires

By Darren Lum

Haliburton Fire Department fire chief Miles Maughan has more than 24 years of experience fighting fires. These are his 10 tips for preventing fires in a household.

1. Ensure households have working fire alarms.

Once a year change the batteries and at the same time vacuum it.

"Fire departments aren't going to save you most of the time. You only have two or three minutes to get out and if you don't get out in two or three minutes then you may not get out," he said.

2. Practice a fire evacuation plan.

Schools and offices do it, why not at your home? Knowing where to go saves valuable time that can save lives.

"You hardly ever have fire at school, but they practice it and they get out in less than two minutes [for] most schools with [close to] 600 people so you should do the same at home," he said.

3. Keep an eye on burning materials.

Things like cigarettes should be discarded safely and candles should not be left unattended.

"Anything with a flame in the house can cause a fire so you have to be careful with that," he said.

4. Don't leave food cooking unattended and know what to do if a fire starts in the kitchen.

"One of the biggest [causes of] fires in the home is cooking fires so you never should leave your cooking unattended," he said.

Never use water for a grease fire, as it will worsen a situation. Use a lid to smother the flames.

Carrying anything on fire, particularly grease fires, can worsen a situation.

5. Maintain space around space heaters and wood stoves.

Eighteen inches is needed along the sides of wood stoves, and some space heaters it is up to three feet. Different appliances have different requirements. Keep space heaters away from curtains.

6. Keep matches and lighters secured and away from children.

Do more than put matches/lighters high up. Secure them on your person, or high in closets or cupboards.

7. Practice safe electricity usage by not overloading an outlet with more than two appliances (toaster or kettle) and keep them unplugged when not in use.

Avoid the "octopus effect" of plugging in appliances to one outlet. Cords can heat up.

8. Know how to respond when there is a fire.

Stay low and crawl in a home on fire to ensure visibility, as smoke rises. Breathing is often easier down low because there is a reduction of the fumes created from synthetic material burning.

"Nowadays most materials in the home are plastic. Once it starts burning it produces toxic gases that [form] very quickly and burns a lot hotter," he said.

9. Safe discarding of ashes from wood stoves.

Maughan recommends people dump the ashes onto a gravel area, or wet them and store in a non-combustible container like a steel pail, or garbage can with lid.

10. Keep nine-volt batteries contacts covered.

The batteries are known to cause a fire when their contacts brush against metal such as coins or steel wool. Use electrical tape to cover the contacts when storing. Even nine-volt batteries left in pants pocket with coins is not recommended.

Maughan said to call the department 705-457- 2126 for any other questions or safety concerns.

Honouring First Nations at the fair

8th Fire is a First Nations prophesy about this time when all people can come together and build a new relationship. How do we do this if we don't know each other?

The Heritage Complex at the Kinmount Fair this past Labour Day Weekend provided a wonderful experience for all those who came and participated in this building of relationship.

Anne Taylor, of the Curve Lake Cultural Centre, shared her stories and invited us to ask those difficult questions that tend to separate us. She demonstrated her basket-making and shared her wealth of knowledge. Elder Murray Whetung , also of Curve Lake, graciously met everyone with a twinkle in his eye; a story or a joke and the wisdom of a true Elder of 94 years. Dorothy Taylor drummed and sang in her strong , lovely voice, and described the regalia of the dancers and then continued doing her beautiful bead work.

From Hiawatha First Nations, Kim Muskratt worked on her porcupine quill work and then demonstrated her beautiful womens dance. Her granddaughters danced and drummed and sang in such sweet voices. Tom Cowie shared about wild rice, and many cultural ways.

There were great artists; an archer; the Minden Fur Harvesters; the Irondale Historical Society. There were the heritage crafters spinning; weaving; knitting; rug hooking; tatting; quilting and leather workers. There were archeological and informative displays, and the Trading Post with furs , traps and items from a way of life of early times.

One could relax in the theatre with 8th Fire and The Land Between; Children found their place in the toy workshop to play and make a feather hair piece; the place to eat offered homemade goodies and drinks while watching and listening to the entertainment on stage. John Foreman, the Broadaxe Hewer , was a big hit with his Appalation Celtic Band.

Yes this was a building of relationship to be sure, and a new beginning for greater understanding in going forward. We thank all those who participated and volunteered their time and expertise to make this a true success.

The Thunderbird Installation in the Village of Kinmount, sponsored by the Kinmount House Bed and Breakfast , will remain, reminding us of honouring First Nations Peoples of the land.
